CALLUM MCKENZIE WYLIE

Year of call
2025

Before starting pupillage, Callum worked as a paralegal in the Business Crime team at a leading criminal law firm. His work included assisting with the preparation of a company director's defence to a bribery prosecution brought by the SFO; a defence to the charge of conspiracy to commit fraud arising from alleged illegal gambling revenues; and an internal investigation concerning allegations of bid-rigging and bribery.

While at law school, Callum volunteered through his university's pro bono programme, assisting the North Kensington Law Centre with legal aid applications in housing matters, including homelessness, eviction and rent arrears. Callum also worked as a legal researcher for a barrister practicing in civil law.

Callum studied History at Durham University, graduating with First-Class Honours. He subsequently completed the LLM Law Conversion Course at BPP University, graduating with Distinction, before completing the Barrister Training Couse, where he was awarded an Advocacy Scholarship and achieved a Distinction in all modules.
